A Cold Wave Due to Strike Bryan
Tonight—Temperature Nearly at Freezing Point in Panhandle.

The first cold wave of the season is due to strike Bryan tonight according to Local Weather Observer, John Daly, Jr. you are going to have to cover up before morning and this gentleman advises us to say that you had better get some cover handy unless you want to get cold in the night. Temperatures from ten to fifteen degrees above the freezing point now prevail in the Panhandle, making the first real advent of fall. Heavy rains have fallen at Austin, Ballinger, Beeville, Columbus, Corpus Christi, Eastland, Galveston, Huntsville, Lampasas, Luling, San Antonio and San Marcos.

It is not thought that a fire will be necessary in the morning but don't forget to unpack the quilts and put one close to the bed where you can get hold of it.
